Abe Coakley, Manhattan Bank Burglar, Dying in Bellevue.

THREE WEEKS OUT OF SING SING

In a Quarrel with a Drunken Man He Was Stabbed in the Breast, Career of Crime of the Injured Man.

Abe Coakley, one of the notorious band of crooks who participated in the Manhattan bank burglary under the leader-ship of Jimmy Hope, is dying in Bellevue Hospital as the result of an euceunter with a drunken man in Manman's saloon at Third avenue and Twenty-seventh street yesterday. Himself, a man noted for his readiness with knife or pistol in an emergency. Coakley fell a victim to the rage of a man who had, or thought he had been cheated by one of 'Coakley's friends. Coakley has only been out of Sing Sing three weeks, after serving eight years there, and he has been putting in those weeks enjoying himself with some of the men who were his associates years ago, but have since been little heard of.

FIGHTING DRUNK.

FIGHTING DRUNK.

There were some twenty men and women in McManus' saloon at 2 o'clock yesterday morning despite the restrictions of the Raines law, and among them were Coakley, Johnny Hope, said to be a brother of Jimmy Hope, and a number of their friends. William Joyce, a porter who had been discharged from the Pulnam House the night before, came into the piace a few minutes later, very drunk and very belligerent. He sat at a table near Coakley and Hope and ordered a drink, paying for it with a bill. The waiter brought him a drink and some change and then went over to talk to Coakley, whom he knew. A few seconds later Jocye called the waiter and accused him of cheating him.

"Aw, you're drunk," said the waiter, whereat Coakley and his friends began to laugh.

"Give me my change or I'll kill you."
reared Joyce; and then turning to Coukley, he said: "Don't you laugh, you crookfor I'll kill you, too."
Coukley replied in a fashion understood.

Coakley replied in a fashion understood by the drunken man, and Joyce rose in a perfect frenzy of rage to attack Coakley, when Peter McCann, another Putnam House porter and a friend of Joyce, came in. He saw that trouble was in the air, and taking Joyce by the arm, said: "Sit down, fally, and keep quiet, If anybody took your money I'll get it back for you."

DREW A KNIFZ.

Joyce wouldn't listen to advice, so Me.
Cana criticed him around the waist and forced him back in his chair. Joyce jumped up arath immediately, and whipalas out a dagger, made a lunge at McCana, The latter steeped aside and the knife sunk a half linch into the bar. McCana dodged two other victous aweeps, and then, budly scared, turned and ran out of the side door of the salesn into the sireet. Joyce went after him, making junge after lunge at him. And the knife went through the talls of McCana's cont, but Joyce was unable to get any nearer after him. Near Twenty-eighth street Mccann fell, and Joyce tumbled over him, making wild sweeps with his knife. Mc cann struck the man between the eyes, and struck the man tent of sight before Joyce could regain his feet.

AFTER COAKLEX.

McCann out of his way, it occurred to Joyce that there pass still Coakley to deal with, and he staggered back to the saloon.
He didn't go inside, evidently meaning to make sure of his man, but hay in wait behind the storm doors on the Twentyseventh street side of the place. He waited patiently for fifteen minutes and then Coakley came out with two friends. He bumped against Joyce before he saw him, but as soon as he realized who the man
was, he said:

"Don't make a fool of yourself. I'll give you what you want and make things nauling out his dasger he plunged it into Conkley's breast.

"He's done me," yelled (wakley as he cell to the sidewalk. fell to the sidewalk.

Joyce gave a whoop of satisfaction and ran across Twenty-seventh street. No one pursued him, but McManus came cut of the saloon, and seeing want had hopened quickly cleared his place of the drinkers and extinguished the lights. Then he run to a neighboring livery stable was bleeding to much that the stableman refused to let him have a cab, saying that the upholstery would be ruined. It was fifteen minutes before another cab was secured, and then Conkley was taken to Bellevue Hospital. His injury was pronounced dangerous, and a Coroner was called to make his ante-mortem state-

In the mantime McCan, having escaped Joyce's knife, ran to the East Thirty-fifth street police station and reported that a man was running amuck with a darger on Fourth avenue. Detective O'Rorke went man was running amuck with a danger on Fourth avenue. Detective O'Rorke went to McManus's saloon after Joyce, but got there just after the stabbing of Coakley. He followed the injured man to Bellevue and there, after a great deal of trouble, succeeded in inducing McManus to tell the truth about the affair. It was to clock before the detective got any trace f Joyce and then he learned that the man He was locked up and later in the day was arraigned in the Yorkville police court and held to await the result of Coakley's

True to the crook's instinct of revenging himself in his own way without the aid of the police. Coakley, when Joyce was aken before him in the hospital, failed taken before him in the nospital, lated to identify him as his assailant. In the statment he made to Coroner Hart he said he was stabbed by somebody he didn't know in coming out of a saleon somewhere. He didn't remember where it was, but the stabbing was done without previouslich. Finally he said he hoped to it was, but the stabbing was done without provocation. Finally he said he hoped to get well. He was too weak to sign the statement so he made his mark.

ALWAYS A CROOK.

There is no record of Coakley's ever having earned an honest living. He was unknown, save as a petry thief, until the b a nat n bank but ary in which he took an active part. Jimmy Hope recognized unknown, save as a petty thief, until the half a half n bank but gary in which he took an active part. Jimmy Hope recognized a great deal of ability—of a certain kind—in Coakley and took him up. On April 28, 1883, when the police were hot on the trail of the gang that had looted the Manhattan bank two and a half years before, Coakley and Peter Ellis or Emerson, better known as "Banjo Pete," from the fact that he was once a negro minstrel, were arrested in Philadelphia. The polir were brought to this city but were discharged for lack of evidence. It was believed at the time that "Banjo Pete" was the man who carried out the two boxes from the bank vault and sorted the bonds, while Coakley, who were false whiskers, took up a conspicuous position in the office of the bank and busied himself in dusting off the shelves. While this was going on. Hope and Johnny Dobbs were in the vault collecting the plunder.

In 1883 Coakley figured in the double

FUNSTON ON THE WAR.

Says Insurgents Must be Thoroughly Whipped -Cavalry Needed.

o return to the United States, the Kansas

General Fred Function and Mrs. Func-tion are with the General's regiment. Gen. Function has undergone an operation re-cessitated by an injury resulting from a fall from his norse while serving in the Cuban army with General Gomez. In the course of an interview General Function remarked that he would not mind staying in Luzzon. He dislikes war, but inasmuch as there is fighting, he would like to remain and add in bringing it to a close. Speaking of the future, he said: There is nothing helier in this life of ours than the tirst consciousness of tree—the first flattering of its sliken wings—the first rising sound and breath of that wind which is so soon to sweep through the soil, to turnly or to destrow—Longfell-w.

Devolve not any nam, and do not spurn anything; for there is no man who hath not his hour, not is there anything that has not its place—Rabbi Hea Azzi.

All the world, all that we are, and all that we have, our bodies and our souls our soilons and our sufferings our conditions at home; our accidents abroad, our many sins and our sedom wirtues, are so many arguments to make our souls dwell low in the valley of humility.—Jeremy Taylor.

The island was always infested with bandits and was never safe for Europeans to travel in Probably after the end of the fighting the highwaymen will be more numerous because the members of Asymnaldo's army, who have lived for years with guns in their hands, have acquired a taste for bush life and would rather continue as highwaymen than return to work.

"Cavalry is greatly needed here. The numery, when dry, is superb for cavalry

The insurgents have none. One of their strong points is their ability to re-trent rapidly. Cavalry could overtake and hopelessly scatter and punish them, and could subsist largely on the country. When cavalry is once here it should be given a chance to go ahead and not be given a chance to go ahead and not be kept in towns for guard duty. Our great-ast successes have been gained when the regimental commanders have been al-lowed to quickly follow up the advantages gained in battle. Small bodies of Ameri-cans operating freely and commanded by officers of dush and energy could badly broak up the enemy. The capture of Agulnaido by cavarry would be a less difficult proposition than the capture of the Apache chiefs in Arizona."

Long Corn, Inspiration Corn, and Corn

by Weight.

Corn is the universal topic in Kansas these diys. Corn starts the conversation on the cars. Corn stalks are stacked up on the cars. Coin states are stacked up at the station doors to show the travelers what that particular locality has done. In the office of the Archison Globe is a collection of stalks with their butts on the floor. When Editor Howe stands on tip-toe he can just reach the ears with the tips of his fingers. Nothing less than 14 fest is considered worthy of show. Our at Downs, half way across the State, the station agent has on exhibition stalks. alation agent has on exhibition stalks which tower above the depot roof. They measure 22 feet and 4 inches. A local poet has been inspired to the following:

The Kansas chinch bugs never die, Each season they appear; But corn stalks twenty-two feet high

Have knocked them out this year The bugs may come—they come in will Will live when they have flown; Give Kansas but her show of rain And she will hold her own.
